London Summer Arbitration School 2022

| Overview

The London Summer Arbitration School will take place on 20-24 June 2022. It will also be possible to attend the school in the online format.

London is one of the world's leading arbitration hubs with parties from all over the world choosing the city as the place for their arbitration, often governed by English law. Over five thousand law firms are based in London and many have offices all over the world.

While many are aware of the London Court of International Arbitration (LCIA), fewer practitioners know about more specialised areas of international arbitration. For example, the number of maritime arbitrations administered by the London Maritime Arbitrators Association (LMAA) in London actually exceeds the number of commercial proceedings handled by LCIA. Most of the disputes resolved by arbitration have an international element.

Building on the success of the Basel Winter Arbitration School, the London Summer Arbitration School will feature an interactive five-day programme introducing participants not only to commercial arbitration, but also to less well-known types of arbitration such as maritime, construction and commodities arbitration. The participants will also engage in discussions of related career and business development opportunities with practitioners and representatives of institutions.

| Curriculum

The school curriculum will cover the following topics:

- ad hoc arbitration
- maritime arbitration
- construction arbitration
- commodities arbitration
- commercial arbitration
- finance & insurance arbitration
- climate change arbitration
- outer space arbitration
- investor-state arbitration
- relationship between arbitral tribunals and domestic courts
- ethics in international arbitration.

In addition, it will include a class on oral & written advocacy skills and a panel on careers in international arbitration with senior London-based practitioners.

Students of CTLS partner institutions and of the University of Basel are entitled to a substantial discount. Please read more and apply by 8 May 2022 here.

Key benefits of participation

All classes will be taught by the Arbitration Lab faculty consisting of top experts in the area of international arbitration. Learning at the Summer School will involve:

- acquiring theoretical and practical arbitration skills in various fields
- gaining knowledge on key transversal topics
- networking opportunities with top academics, practitioners and international civil servants
- better understanding of various career paths in international arbitration
- exposure to novel teaching methods and a collection of teaching materials
- a certificate of completion

Venue

Many of the world's major banks and law firms are headquartered in London, and law firms from the United States often use London as a gateway to their practice in Europe. The law of England and Wales remains the most frequently chosen law applicable to contracts not only in Europe but in Asia, Africa, and other parts of the world. English remains the most common language of business communication today with many contracts drafted in English and arbitral proceedings conducted in English. This is why some call London both the financial and the legal capital of Europe.

The English justice system based on common law has centuries of tradition behind it and shaped many other legal systems of the world. London is renowned for the quality and impartiality of its judges. That makes London a frequently chosen seat of arbitration for many international disputes. In addition, London is home to the London Court of International Arbitration (LCIA), the London Maritime Arbitration Association (LMAA), various arbitral institutions dealing with commodities arbitration such as the Grain and Feed Trade Association (GAFTA).

London remains Europe's most visited city by tourists. Some of the city's best museums, including the British Museum, the Tate Modern and the Museum of London are within a short walk from the winter school's location. The shopping temptations of the Oxford Street and the bars of Soho are also a stone's throw away. The participants will benefit from a bespoke Legal London Walk, taking them to the Inns of Court, the Royal Court of Justice and the Old Bailey.
